Some women engineers and mechanics in motor sport

Ruth Buscombe, aerodynamicist for Ferrari and Sauber formula one teams

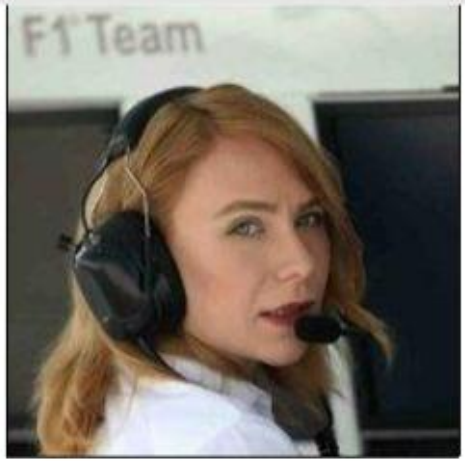

Ruth Buscombe has a first-class honours Masters degree in aerodynamics

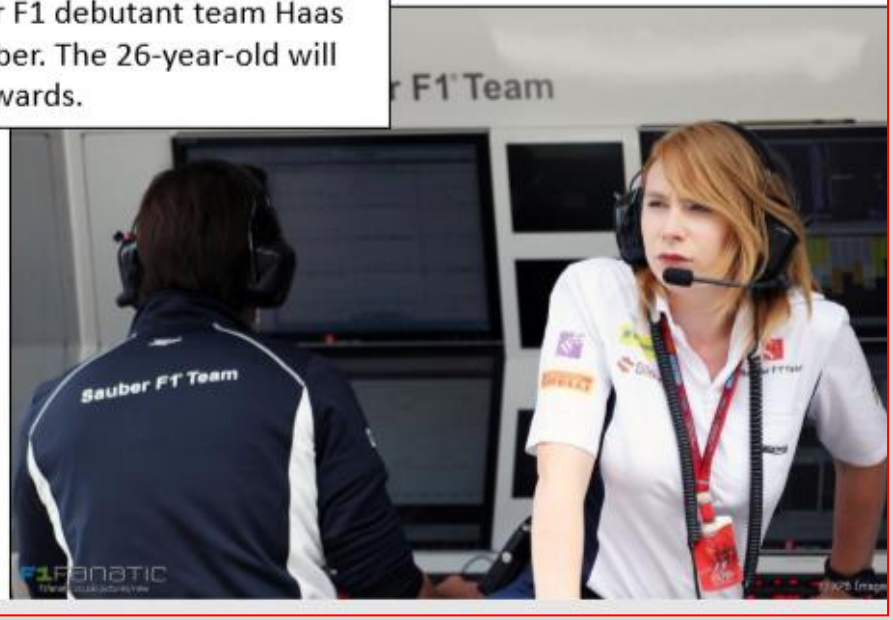

“Racing is so competitive the team don’t care whether it’s a woman or a chipmunk generating the data.”

Sauber has continued its recent recruitment drive by appointing former Ferrari and Haas engineer Ruth Buscombe as a strategist.

Buscombe worked at Haas earlier this season and helped orchestrate Romain Grosjean's fifth- and sixth-place finishes in Australia and Bahrain. Previously she had been at Ferrari as a simulations development engineer before moving into the role of race strategist in 2013. She left Ferrari at the end of 2015 for F1 debutant team Haas as strategy engineer, the same role she has now taken at Sauber. The 26-year-old will start working for the team from the Malaysian Grand Prix onwards.
